Richard Mills joins Amiga Specialty as MD of Transactional Risks, UK & Europe

Richard Mills has joined B.P Marsh-backed managing general agent Amiga Specialty as Transactional Risks Managing Director, UK & Europe effective immediately.

Based in London, his responsibilities will include establishing the transactional risks business line for Amiga, strategic positioning, distribution and working with insurance carrier partners to provide a best-in-class service proposition. He reports to Amiga Specialty Group MD, Adam Kembrooke.

“I am delighted to have someone of Richard’s calibre joining us and his appointment sets the stage for our successful entrance into the transactional space,” Kembrooke said. “His extensive knowledge, expertise, commitment to service, and an impressive track record of building successful teams and books of business that deliver meaningful value for partners, gives us an excellent foundation to build-out our transactional risks proposition.”

Mills began his insurance career at Capital Risks in 2018 and was most recently Transactional Risks Director at Nexus Underwriting. Prior to joining Capital he held a number of legal roles including at Proskauer Rose LLP and Linklaters LLP.

Mills commented: “I am thrilled to be joining Amiga Specialty at such an exciting time in its development and can’t wait to start building the transactional risks team with talented professionals. In my career, I’ve been hugely proud to realise the untapped potential of many underwriters and I am excited to have the opportunity to do that again in a collaborative, service-led environment. I’m looking forward to growing the team and offering our brokers and carriers the very best service across the transactional risks market.”
